SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR JUNE 15

PRAYER.

LESSON TEXTS—Matt. 6:5-15; Luke 18: 1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.—Phil. 4:6.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Gen. 18:23-32; Ex. 32:9-14; 33; Matt. 21:18-22; Luke 11: 1-13; John 17:1-26; 1 Thess. 5:17; James 5: 13-18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Talking With the Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaches How to Pray.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Prayer a Privilege and a Duty.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Conception of Prayer.

I. The Proper Motive in Prayer (Matt. 6:5-8).

The righteousness which counts with God is doing right deeds with the right motive. Righteous as the act of praying is it may be an abomination unto God:

1. If it be to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). Much of the public praying is false—when there is more thought of what the people think than of what God thinks. In praying the individual is dealing with God, therefore if he be engaged in it to attract men's attention it is blasphemous. It is not wrong to pray on the street corner and in the synagogue; that which is condemned is doing it to be seen of men.

2. If there be the use of vain repetitions (v. 7). This does not mean that we should ask but once, for we have examples of Christ and of Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26: 39-44; II Cor. 12:7-9), but meaningless repetitions as done by the heathen. The reason assigned is that "your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him" (v. 8). God is pleased with true prayer (v. 6). We should have a real desire for fellowship with God. Since prayer is a transaction of the soul with God, we should go to our inner chamber, where only God can hear, and there commune with him.

II. The Model Prayer (Matt. 6:9-15).

1. Right relationship. "Our Father." Only those who have become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ (Gal. 3:26) can pray aright.

2. Right attitude. "Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come." When we realize that we have been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of his dear Son (Col. 1:13) by being made the children of God we cannot help pouring out our souls to him in gratitude and praise, longing for the coming of his kingdom.

3. Right spirit (1) That of trust which looks to him for daily bread. (2) That of love which results in the forgiveness of others. God will not listen to the prayer of the one who has an unforgiving spirit. (3) That of holiness which moves us to pray not to be led in temptation, and longs to be delivered from the evil one.

4. The ascription of praise. "Thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory forever."

III. Persistency in Prayer (Luke 18: 1-8).

The teaching of this parable is that men ought always to pray and not to faint (v. 1). The context shows that praying should be the business of the church while the Lord is absent. Having referred to the coming of the Lord at the close of the preceding chapter he uses this parable to enforce the obligation of the church under the figure of a widow crying day and night unto God. Though the unjust judge had neither fear of God nor regard for man he avenged her of her enemies. Much more, then, will the tender loving Father, God, avenge his own elect (v. 7). God is pleased with those who persistently pray, or, as popularly expressed, "pray through."

IV. The Proper Attitude in Prayer (Luke 18:9-14).

This is brought out in striking contrast by two men praying. The Pharisee's sense of self practically excluded the consciousness of God. The poor publican had a most keen sense of God and therefore sought his mercy. The Pharisee presented personal credentials, while the publican cast himself upon God's mercy. The publican was justified, while the Pharisee was rejected. Let us come into the presence of God with humility, for God is holy.

Easy to Commit Sin.

It is a great deal easier to commit a second sin than it was to commit the first, and a great deal harder to repent of a second, than it was to repent of the first.—Benjamin Whitcomb.

Per One Another.

The will of God respecting us is that we shall live by each other's happiness, and life. . . . Men help each other by their joy, not by their sorrow. They are not intended to slay themselves for each other, but to strengthen themselves for each other. —Ruskin.

To Have Knowledge.

If we would indeed have knowledge thrive and flourish, we must water the tender plants of it with holiness.—John Smith.

Counted 93,000 Ants.

An ant hill two feet in height contains about 93,000 ants, according to the observations and counting, extending over two years, carried out by a well-known naturalist.

Goodby, Billy

Goodbye, Billy Sunday,
Your absence we deplore,
We miss you as we have no other
Evangelist before.

God called you here that many a soul
Might now His word receive—
The gospel preached, you delivered
it fine,
And many on Him believed.

Some people there are so stubborn
'Tis hard for them to relent,
Their short life here on earth is gone
Before they ever repent.

But the mighty power in which you preached
God's loving words to tell
Has turned many a wandering
soul,
Away from the gates of hell.

We wish you in our community
Again some other day,
That you may once more call some
soul
Who may have gone astray.

In delivering the message unto the people,
In no way did you retard,
You knew the way to reach the spot
And you hit the subject hard.

We would like you in our country
church,
Could we but afford the means,
But we could never collect the amount
That the city pays, it seems.

The various ways in which you preached
The gospel to convey,
Has brought to God many a one
To walk in the narrow way.

We render to you our heartfelt thanks
For the good you have done, and more,
We hope to meet with you again
Upon some happier shore.

When you leave your home on earth, Billy,
To dwell beyond the sky,
And the pearly gates you enter
To your mansion up on high,

You will find that many a soul
Whom you converted years ago
Will be over there to welcome you,
Upon that beautiful shore.

May God bless you, Billy Sunday,
For the souls that you have won,
And give to you a home in heaven
When your good work here is done.

MRS. JOHN GOODWIN.

Be Careful About Dosing Your Livestock

Both for human beings and for their livestock, our farmers put too much dependence on drugs. The Massachusetts Experiment Station in warning farmers against condimental stock foods and "condition powers" and the fraudulent claims made in advertising them adds:

"Do Healthy Animals Need Medicine?—Animals in a state of health do not need condition powders or tonic foods. There is in the body of a healthy animal a condition of equilibrium of all body functions. The process of digestion and assimilation are at their best. All that is required to maintain this condition of balance is that the animal be kept under sanitary conditions, and receive a sufficient supply of healthful, nutritive food and pure water. While tonics may improve the appetite so that the animal will temporarily consume and digest more food, should this increased quantity of nutrients consumed not be appropriated by the tissues of the body, harm may result from thus overloading the lymphatic system, or from an increased action of the excreting organs.

"Treatment of Sick Animals.—It is believed to be unwise to give drugs to animals when it can possibly be avoided. Even such simple substances as salts, ginger, gentian and the like should be used as sparingly as possible. If an animal is out of condition, and it is believed a tonic will be helpful, try the following:

"Pulverized gentian, 1 pound; pulverized ginger, 1 pound; pulverized saltpeter, 1 pound; and pulverized iron sulphate, ½ pound.

"Mix and give 1 tablespoonful in the feed once a day for ten days, omit three days, then give ten days more. Cost of the above, twenty cents a pound. In exceptional cases, when skilled medical treatment appears absolutely necessary, it is far wiser to employ a reliable veterinary than to attempt home doctoring by the indiscriminate use of patent medicines or powders recommended to cure everything."—Progressive Farmer.

Radium in Sea Salt.

Samples of sea salt collected during a recent voyage in the Pacific and subantarctic regions have been examined for their radium content. The amount of radium was found to be negligibly small compared with values that have been found in others collected near land, and this result is in accordance with the prevailing view that the radium content of sea salt diminishes with increase of distance from land.

Ambitious.

Nat Goodwin tells one on a convivial friend of his. "I hadn't seen him for several years, and when we met I couldn't help commenting on the brilliant redness of his nose.

"John, it must have cost you a lot of money to paint your nose so richly," I remarked.

"Yes, Mr. Goodwin," agreed John, beaming with pride, "and now I'm a big up to get it varnished, sir."

Who Founded Jerusalem?

Origin and early history are obscure. It was identified by Josephus with Salem, a city whose king some thirty-five centuries ago was Melchisedech, a Chaldean. The city did not pass completely to possession of the Jews until the time of David.

Family Verbs.

Speaking of odd verbs, it has been the custom for years in a certain Boston family to say when the weather has cleared, "It has nicened up." The other day, one of them was even heard to say, "It has nicened up nicely."—Boston Transcript.

Soil Fertility and Bigger Yields Per Acre Our Primary Agricultural Problem

According to the Editor of the United States Experiment Station Record, Director Russell of the Rothamstead (England) Experiment Station says that "the English farmer's task in the future will be to increase his yield" But he further states: "We must strengthen the straw, improve the tillering, regulate to some extent the development of grain and control the pests. Until these are all solved we cannot hope to get much further with increased wheat yields"

The interesting part of this is that so good an authority sees the necessity of still further increasing the English yields of wheat per acre. In this country, although we produce less than one-half the English yields per acre, some of our would-be agricultural economists tell us that we have solved our production problems, have even already given too much attention to production. So long as American farmers produce only about 14 bushels of wheat per acre, so long as the South produces le s than 20 bushels of corn and England produces for an average of ten years 32 8 bushels of wheat per acre, it is ridiculous to suppose that, while in competition with English farmers, we have no further production problems calling for solution. The great American agricul ural problem is greater soil fertility and greater yields per acre. This is particularly true of the South, and the sooner we recognize these facts the more progress we will be able to make in our agricultural development. The world will not pay us prices sufficient to make 18 to 20 bushels of corn per acre profitable crops. We must get better prices than we have in the past, but we cannot remain inefficient farmers and still expect the world to pay us for this inefficiency. Service is money necessary to build the roads, maintain the schools and make the type of farm homes necessary to a satisfactory farm life.—Progressive Farmer.

Health About Gone

Many thousands of women suffering from womanly trouble, have been benefited by the use of Cardui, the woman's tonic, according to letters we receive, similar to this one from Mrs. Z. V. Spell, of Hayne, N. C. "I could not stand on my feet, and just suffered terribly," she says. "An my suffering was very great, and he had tried other remedies, Dr. — had us get Cardui. . . I began improving, and it cured me. I know, and my doctor knows, what Cardui did for me, for my nerves and health were about gone."

TAKE
CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic

She writes further: "I am in splendid health . . . can do my work. I feel I owe it to Cardui, for I was in dreadful condition." If you are nervous, run down and weak, or suffer from headache, backache, dizzy spells, try Cardui. Thousands of women praise this medicine for the good it has done them, and many physicians who have used Cardui successfully with their women patients, for years, endorse this medicine. Think what it means to be in splendid health, like Mrs. Spell. Give Cardui a trial.

The following resolution was passed by the Board:

Whereas, the Board of Supervisors of Appomattox county supplement the salaries of the Home Demonstration Agent and the County Farm Agent in this county to quite an extent, and the Board being interested to a large extent in the work being done by said Agents, it deems it wise and a good business policy to have monthly reports from said Agents of the work being done by them, and hereby makes request of said Home Demonstration Agent and County Farm Agent, that they will make a report in general of the work done by them during the year, in person to this Board at its next regular meeting, and then continue to make monthly reports to this Board at each of its regular monthly meetings thereafter, of their projects and plans and the results being obtained, and the Clerk of this Board is directed to transmit a copy of this minute to each of said Agents.

The Board considered the matter of making some disposition of the County Farm at the end of this year, and it is the sense of this Board that the present arrangement of operation of said county farm be discontinued at the end of this year.

The question of establishing a joint home for the poor between this and several of the adjoining counties was considered by the Board and it was decided to make an effort to get Buckingham county to join this and several other counties in establishing a joint poor house, and to that end the members of this Board and S. L. Ferguson are hereby appointed a committee to go before the Buckingham Board of Supervisors and present this matter with a view of enlisting their co-operation in this matter.

Storing Dried Vegetables

The packing and storage of dried vegetables are as important as their drying.

Therefore when drying give thought to how they are to be kept so that rats, mice, bugs and moles cannot reach them.

When the fruit or vegetable is dried and put in its container set in a warm place to dry off any possible moisture before the final sealing. An oven with the door open or the back of the stove is a very good place for this, because the temperature there is too warm to be comfortable for bugs, but not hot enough to burn. Let set this way for several hours, then close, to be opened only when you are ready to put them in soak.

Another method of preparing for storage, or conditioning, is to place the dried vegetables in boxes add pour from one box to another once a day for three or four days. This method must be used with care that bugs and moths may not reach the material to deposit eggs.

It is very important that bugs do not find access to dried fruit and vegetables when taking out enough for a meal. Containers should therefore be small, preferably bontaining only enough for a day, or two meals.

Tin cans are too expensive to purchase for storage, but if those in which baking powder, coffee, biscuit and other foods come are saved carefully, they serve the purpose equally well. Be careful that the top fits tightly. If it does not, dip in paraffin or cut a piece of clean cotton the size and shape to cover the crack, dip in melted paraffin and lay quickly over the place that bugs might enter.

Small paper bags are very good. Some people prefer to fold over the top, pin, and dip the top in paraffin. Others prefer to tie tightly with a string and dip also in paraffin. An excellent method is to put in small paper bags, seal, and keep in large tin cans.

Glass is expensive if bought for the purpose, though there is nothing that will give a housewife more joy than a row of uniform jars for containing her stock of dried food and spices. Many glass jars, however, can be obtained easily,—among these are cracked but not broken fruit jars, large square bottles from which gum is sold and other wide mouthed bottles.

Keep tin and paper vessels in a dry place, as they may rust or mold. A dry upper shelf in the pantry is good.

Labels are a necessity. Denison's gummed labels are best, but any good paper applied with a good paste will serve.

Do not write on the bag after the material is ready to store, as pen or pencil may punch a hole through which bugs might enter.

Cottage Cheese

Take from two to three gallons of skimmed milk and let it stand in a warm place until it clabbers (about twenty-four hours). Then pour this into a clean cloth bag and let it drain over night, until dry. Take this out and put into a bowl with two teaspoons of salt and mix until it becomes as smooth as butter. Take a half pint of cream, mix into this and the cheese is ready to put away in a clean dish until wanted for eating. This is nice to spread on hot bread.

You might be able to hide a piano in your home so the wife wouldn't find it; but you can't hide a quart of booze where she won't locate it.

Real Prohibition

The Volstead bill for the enforcement of prohibition, which is understood to have the indorsement and approval of the Antisaloon League, evidently is intended to impart a bone dryness to the nation that was scarcely dreamed of in the philosophy of the wets. All hope of evading the full effects of prohibition is dashed by a reading of this bill. For instance, the word liquor is construed to include "any vinous, fermented, distilled, malt or alcoholic liquor containing one half of one per cent alcohol."

That puts the ban, if it is enforced literally, upon cider, grape juice and a lot of so-called soft drinks which now are regarded as harmless. Stewed prunes will be subject to suspicion under it. It takes every trace of a kick out of every beverage known, and leaves not even a memory.

Nor can a dry nation place any reliance in physicians or druggists under the provisions of this bill, for while it is permitted to sell liquor on prescription, yet the privilege is hemmed about with such rigid restrictions as to make it unavailable as a practical source of supply. Not more than a pint may be sold upon any single prescription and no prescription can be refilled. Doctors must keep a complete record of every prescription issued, with the name of the patient and the date he received it, together with a statement of "the amount and frequency of the dose."

Furthermore, the person who has laid away a supply for the drought has wrought in vain, if this bill goes through, for it is unlawful to "manufacture, sell, give away, transport, import, export, deliver, furnish, receive, possess or use any intoxicating liquor." If there is any loopholes in this provision it is hard to find.—Washington Post.

Farmer as a Business Man

Every farmer should have an office. He should have a desk and keep a set of books and records.

The government insists that farmers keep sufficient records so as to make correct returns for income tax.

And, even were this not necessary, farmers nowadays want to know just where they stand, just where their earnings come from.

And the core of this office should be a typewriter, the greatest piece of office machinery ever invented.

No merchant, no lawyer, no manufacturer—no man needs a typewriter more than a farmer.

A farm represents a large investment, larger than that of the average merchant. The capital of a farming business should be protected by modern methods just as much as that of the progressive, successful business man.

Why shouldn't a farmer have a printed letterhead? Like the banker, the lawyer, the storekeeper? Why shouldn't your letters go out to the world with a business-like appearance?

Force of Habit

At the family prize day of a certain school the head boy rose to give his recitation.

"Friends, Romans Countrymen," he vociferated, "lend me your ears!"

"There," commented the mother of a defeated pupil, sneeringly, "that's Mrs. Biggs' boy. He wouldn't be his mother's son if he didn't want to borrow something."—Tid-Bits.

A woman's clothes often look as nifty on her as they do in the advertisements. But a man's clothes never do.

OLD BUCKINGHAM.

THE GRAND OLD COUNTY PHOTOGRAPHED

Many Interesting Reports Made of Her People,

A trip up to Stinson's Mill found Mr. Willie Stinson and his help at the mill ready to grind my load of wheat. He is nicely fixed for the business; has his mill arranged so that he can use either water power or run the mill with the immense engine that he has. He makes nice flour and takes a little less than 8½ bushels of wheat to the barrel.

When I began my harvest last week I was surprised to find I had four hands ready to help. The straw was the longest I ever saw handled and I think the grain is fairly good.

My attention has been called to the behavior of the inmates of a house where only women reside and where men are seen to gather more frequently than good morals would warrant But no citizen has complained to me in my position as peace officer, as yet.

Justice of the Peace E. B. Glover heard a case against Buster Wilson last week; this negro boy was fined $25 and given 60 days in jail and required to give a peace bond in the sum of $100 to keep the peace for 12 months. At the trial Wilson was represented by Mr. John B. Boatwright, who took an appeal to the circuit court for his client, who gave bail in the sum of $250 for his appearance at the September term. Buster Wilson's name was mentioned in this correspondence previously, when he struck Willie Mays over the head with a whip or whipstaff.

Mrs. Lelia Fredericks has been spending some time with her mother, Mrs. Sue Spencer, and she is looking unusually well.

Messrs. Wood and Andrews, opposing candidates for commissioner of the revenue, are not letting any grass grow under their feet. But the primary doesn't come off until August and there is plenty of time in which to make the canvass.

Sorry Mr. J. M. Seward has been having sickness in his family. A good citizen and good man Mr. Seward is.

"A dry June for a good corn year" is an old saying, and we hope we are having enough of the dry spell for the corn to be worked and thinned.

Miss Grace B. Armstrong of the high school faculty the past session has asked the school board to give her until August 1st to consider the matter of resuming her work here. Another teacher in the high school department will have to be employed, to bring this school up to the standard of a first grade four year high school.

No one ever saw a bigger crop of blackberries than we have this time and I heard an old time brandy maker say he supposed that people would post their lands this time to keep others from getting the berries. Meanwhile the drink that is made of corn meal and yeast cake is still being made and used, and on the breath of some people I smell, what Commissioner Peters and all his men, can't keep men from making and drinking.

I don't envy the members of the General Assembly who are soon to gather in Richmond, but I do hope the proposed plan of county, State and national aid in road building may materialize and that we may have a good road in every direction we wish to travel. Who will represent this district in the senate during the extra session of the legislature? I suppose Governor Davis will appoint Mr. S. L. Ferguson to represent our district, if we do have an extra session, as now seems likely.

Stapleton

On May the 31st there was a quiet marriage at the home of Mr. James Eagle, when his sister, Bertha, plighted her troth to Mr. Henry Russell Hatchett, of Danville.

The bride was attired in a dark blue traveling suit with hat and gloves to match and carried pink roses.

The groom is an engineer on the Southern railroad, with head quarters in Danville and they will make their future home at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Drinkard acted as best man and matron of honor. On account of the sickness of the bride's pastor, Rev. J. M. Street officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Taylor and children, of Kingsport, are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E Moore, at Beckham. Mrs. Moore is quite ill and grave doubts are entertained in regard to her recovery.

We are sorry to say that Mrs. J. P. Grow, who has been so ill for some time, is no better.

Mrs. A. F. Drinkard and daughter, Lillian, were visitors in Lynchburg last week-end.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrh Medicine was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrh Medicine is what produces such wonderful results in catarrhal conditions. Send for testimonials, free.
